

Culture, Organization and Management (MSc)

Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam - Faculteit der Sociale Wetenschappen - M Culture, Organization and Management - 2014-2015

In the one-year Master's programme in Culture, Organization and Management (COM), students develop an overview of the Organizational Sciences, and more particularly acquire the knowledge and skills to research, describe and explain the cultural dimension of management within organizations. Central themes are Globalization, Transnational Entrepreneurship, Organizational Culture Change, and Identity in Organizations. These themes are studied with the help of qualitative research methods with a special emphasis on ethnography. COM students can do field research in the Netherlands, but they are also encouraged to choose fieldwork sites in other world regions, such as Southeast Asia, Southern Africa and the Caribbean.

Doel vak

The aim of this course is to provide the necessary knowledge and reflection to enable critical understanding of the processes of exclusion and inclusion within organizations. By reflecting upon different approaches to identity, culture and power in organizations, this course contributes to creating an academic foundation to contextualize organizational practices related to cultural diversity within broader theoretical and societal frameworks. In addition, the course will stimulate a rethinking of oft-employed concepts and approaches, such as power and diversity, in order to deal with the new challenges of the present and the future.

Inhoud vak

In this time of ubiquitous cultural diversity, which some refer to as the context of super-diversity, we are witness to contradictory processes. On the one hand there is an increasing demand for culturally sensitive measures and cultural recognition in different social spheres. On the other, we see a growth in culturally exclusionary practices in a variety of domains. The same paradox is visible within organizations. While it is believed that the organizations of the future will be inclusive organizations embracing all available talent and reaching diverse target groups, there is an increasing sense that they are driving around in circles never reaching a destination. The main focus of this course will be on the ways that organizational processes are shaped and reshaped through the interface with societal discourses that construct particular images of otherness. These images contribute to processes of inclusion or exclusion within organizations, affecting access to (power) positions. These images of otherness concern not only a horizontal division of identities but have a normative aspect by presenting the other as deviation of the norm. By contextualizing organizational processes within societal discourses this course will provide an understanding of explicit and subtle processes which contribute to the prominence of certain identities above others along with the ways in which the intersection of identities becomes a source of dominance or exclusion.

Doel vak

By writing their Master's Thesis students demonstrate their ability to carry out independent academic research. In the thesis, formerly acquired theoretical and practical knowledge, as well as empirical field data research are combined, analyzed and presented in a coherent manner.

Inhoud vak

The Master's thesis is the final subject of the Master COM, combining a fieldwork period and the actual thesis writing. The thesis is assessed with respect to the following: use of academic writing conventions; problematization of theme and theoretical concepts; critical use of theory, data and methods; quality of analyses, and reflection on an academically and socially relevant debates related to the theme of choice.

Onderwijsvorm

Individual and group supervision; students join a thematic thesis group, or in some cases opt for individual supervision, depending on the topic and supervisor availability. In October, some lecturers start 'advertising' for their research projects (via BlackBoard).

Overige informatie

In practice, the preparation for the thesis starts in September / October with the "Master's Thesis Fair", in which students contact possible supervisors. From then on, students start preparing for the theoretical and methodological parts. The process of thesis supervision ultimately starts with the Research Proposal in period 3. In period 4 students also take parallel courses in the module "Research Lab" (online course, to enable field work).

Note: announcements during the first semester, e.g. about Thesis Market, supervision groups, and lecturers involved, placed under 'Research Proposal' via BB.

Doel vak

- Knowledge of processes of organizing within different organizational settings;
- Understanding of different approaches and perspectives on the analysis of organization;
- Analysis of academic texts, and the application of theoretical debates to case studies.

Inhoud vak

Organizational Science sets the stage for researching, analysing and theorising processes of organizing in a variety of contexts. In this course we conceptualise organizations not as fixed entities but as ongoing processes of organizing. We combine a focus on organizational actors' sensemaking practices and their day-to-day (inter)actions with developing a sensitivity to particular situational and institutional contexts in which these interactions emerge or are embedded. Through an analysis of classic, contemporary and critical texts as well as exemplary case studies students develop knowledge of and insight in themes such as power and institutions, structure and culture, control and resistance, collaboration and conflict, and identity and identification. Taking a distinctly social scientific approach, we explore various theoretical and methodological debates in the field of organization science in order to develop an understanding of different perspectives to studying organizations and organizing.

Inhoud vak

The course consist of two elements: general lectures and thesis supervision sessions. Before students write a research proposal guided by their supervisors, we offer three general (guest) lectures in which overall themes and topics are addressed. Handling theories, styles of argument, and composition (compulsory parts) of the thesis. The general lectures are followed by session in the thesis groups, leading up to the research proposal. The final research proposal needs to be accepted and marked by the supervisor before a student can start his/her field research.

Niveau	400

Doel vak

Introduction to a constructivist approach for studying organizations and processes of organizing. Analysis of academic texts, and the application of theory to case studies. Training in methods of organizational ethnography and related methods for critical management studies.

Inhoud vak

Both theoretically and methodologically, Organizational Sensemaking sets the stage for the Master Culture, Organization and Management. We focus on (i) the sense-making, and sense-breaking (disrupting, intentionally or not) practices of social actors in (inter)organizational settings, and (ii) our own sensemaking efforts as organizational researchers.

First, to bring into view organizational actors' attempts to make (or disrupt) sense of everyday organizational life, we discuss concepts such as power, culture and identity, and their symbolic manifestations in (inter)actions (practices), discourse (talk and text), and materiality (artefacts). We illustrate this perspective to such fields of study as organizational change, managerial control and resistance, intercultural communication, and processes of inclusion/exclusion.

Second, we also zoom in on ethnographic and other interpretative methods for doing research in and between organizations. In our understanding of teaching, discussion and debate are important. Therefore, the interfaces of theoretical insights and application of methods emerge via discussion of the art of observation; the importance of reflexivity; the role (and limitations) of the researcher; and different options for gathering data (written, pictured, filmed).

Onderwijsvorm

Lectures and, from the second week on, a media project (small groups with weekly feedback). Depending on the possibilities of online class rooms, part of the course can be presented via online assignments. Alternatively, we plan a tutorial, i.e. lectures, exercises, and project work.

Doel vak

The aim of the course is to acquire knowledge and understanding of societal, professional and scientific debates addressing processes of organizing in a globalizing world. The prevailing debates will be differentiated according to the domains of economic developments, political processes, social change and cultural transformation.

Inhoud vak

In Western management literature it is assumed that processes of globalization generate ever-larger organizations stretching across national borders and showing high levels of integration according to Western models of the Transnational Corporation (TNC). Economies of scale, the decline of the nation state as provider of both legal protection and national identity, the emergence of a homogeneous culture worldwide and the triumph of neo-liberal thinking seem to be the achievement of globalization. Of particular interest is the emergence of a global educational industry that seems to advance the ongoing standardization of organizational practices and culture. However, recent literature on globalization challenges this point of view. Coalitions and cooperative efforts in cross-border ventures generate network(ed) organizations, regionally and locally embedded organizations and organizational networks, a larger diversity in (organizational) cultures and identities, and increasing interest in corporate social responsibility (CSR) and social entrepreneurship. At the same time, governments have to rethink the reach of their policies and new concepts of governance are taking root, affecting ideas about the management of private and public sector organizations as much as of development organizations. New public management, public-private partnerships and partially conflicting demands for standardization of organizational processes and cultures versus ongoing diversification are the challenges emerging as a consequence of globalization.
